COMPLAINT

Plaintiff Matt Furie, for his Complaint against Defendant Jessica Logsdon, alleges on personal knowledge as to matters relating to himself, and on information and belief as to all other matters, as follows:

NATURE OF ACTION

1. This is an action to end the misappropriation of Pepe the Frog (“Pepe”) by Jessica Logsdon (“Logsdon” or “Defendant”), including her sale of paintings copying Pepe through her website, jessicalogsdon.com, and eBay storefront. See Exs. A (internet archive of jessicalogsdon.com); B (Logsdon’s eBay postings).

2. Artist Matt Furie created the Pepe the Frog character in the early 2000s. Pepe is an anthropomorphic frog often depicted with large, rounded, red/brown lips; bulging eyes and puffy eyelids; and a human-shaped body, as shown below:

3. At his creation, Pepe was a “peaceful frog-dude”—a kind and blissful cartoon character, who lived alongside three animal roommates, and became famous in part because of his catchphrase, “feels good man.” By 2014, the Pepe character featured prominently in internet memes.

4. But beginning in 2015, various fringe groups connected with the alt-right attempted to coopt Pepe by mixing images of Pepe with images of hate, including white supremacist language and symbols, Nazi symbols, and other offensive imagery. Furie has worked hard to counteract that negative image of Pepe, including collaborating with the Anti-Defamation League on the #SavePepe campaign to restore Pepe as a character representing of peace, togetherness, and fun.

5. Despite Furie’s efforts, individuals like Logsdon have misused Furie’s Pepe character and copied Pepe images for use in dozens of images sold online to promote the violent and hateful messages espoused by the alt-right fringe groups. In doing so, Logsdon not only copied Furie’s original creation, but also freeloaded off Pepe’s popularity and Furie’s labor.

Infringing Work Entitled “Alt-Right”	Infringing Work Entitled “Pepe Patrol”

7. Moreover, according to Logsdon’s Twitter feed, @USARTStar, she claims to have sold oil paintings featuring Pepe the Frog, including one called “Antifa” depicting an image of a masked Pepe holding a machine gun in front of what appears to be the White House (below left), and another with Pepe making an “OK” sign with his hands below (right)—a gesture associated with the alt-right.¹ See Ex. C (excerpts from Logsdon’s Twitter feed).

8. Logsdon has also published and attempted to sell copies of Pepe the Frog with titles such as “Charlottesville” and “Drain the Swamp”—again, evoking events, images, and themes associated with the alt-right. These copies include the following:

Pepe the Frog Created by Matt Furie	Logsdon Infringing Work Entitled “Charlottesville”	Infringing Images from Logsdon’s “Drain the Swamp” collection

9. On September 15, 2017, Furie requested that Logsdon cease and desist her use of Pepe, and sent a takedown notification to Square (which hosts Logsdon’s website) pursuant to the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (“DMCA”) for Logsdon’s website, jessicalogsdon.com. Logsdon failed to comply with Furie’s cease and desist request and continues to promote these images on her Twitter and eBay pages. She also provided a counternotification under the DMCA to reinstate her infringing work.

10. This is therefore an action for copyright infringement. Logsdon has infringed Furie’s copyright in the Pepe the Frog character and image, and has done so knowingly and willfully.

PARTIES

11. Plaintiff Matt Furie is an artist residing in California. His art includes “children’s book illustrations for adults,” that blend child-like characters and adult situations. He is well-known for, among other things, his comic book series Boy’s Club and his wordless children’s book The Night Riders.

12. Defendant Jessica Logsdon is an individual residing in Kansas City, Missouri. On information and belief, Logsdon operates the website, jessicalogsdon.com and the Twitter feed, <https://twitter.com/usartstar>, and posts under the user name “theartistjessicalogsdon” on the websites eBay.com and 4chan.com.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

13. This is an action for copyright infringement, arising under the Copyright Act of 1976, as amended, 17 U.S.C. §§ 101 et seq. (“Copyright Act”).

14. This Court has jurisdiction over this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1338(a).

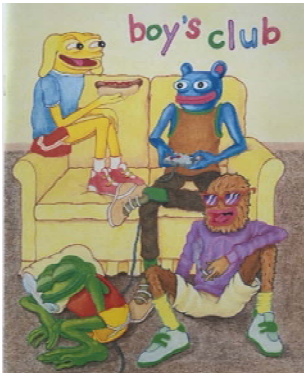

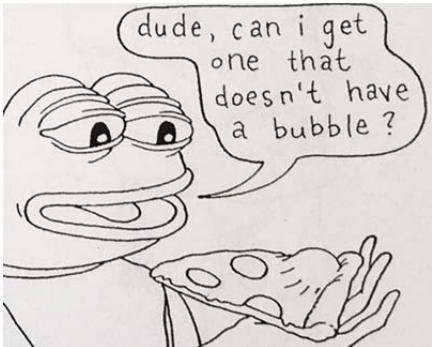

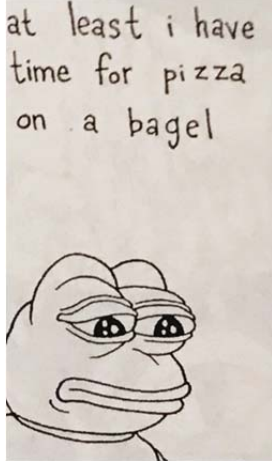

15. This Court has personal jurisdiction over Logsdon because she resides in Kansas City, Missouri, and has consented to the Court’s jurisdiction under 17 U.S.C. § 512(g)(3) pursuant to her counternotice under the DMCA. See Ex. D. In addition, this Court has personal jurisdiction over Logsdon because, on information and belief, she committed all or substantially all of the acts giving rise to the claims in Kansas City, Missouri, specifically by generating her infringing works from her place of business and/or her home.

16. Venue is proper in this judicial district under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1391(b) and 1400(a) because a substantial part of the events giving rise to the claims (namely, Logsdon’s copying of the Pepe character and images) occurred in this judicial district, and because Defendant resides in this district.

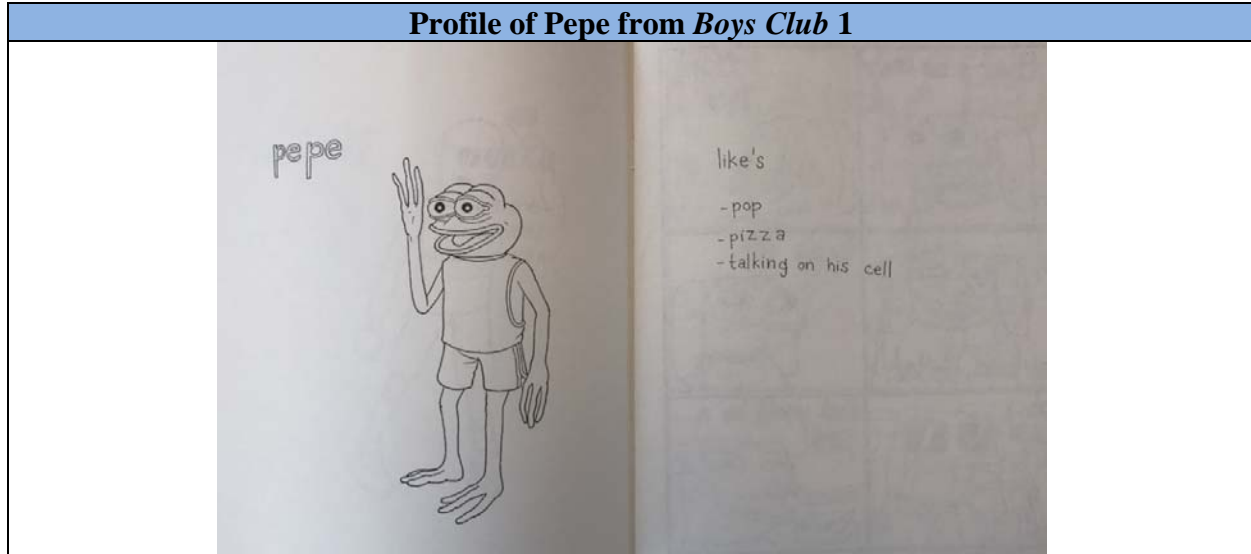

FACTS

Furie's Creation of Pepe the Frog

- 17. Matt Furie conceived of the character of Pepe the Frog in the early 2000s.
- 18. Pepe is an anthropomorphic frog with a human-shaped body and frog head. In color images, Pepe is typically depicted as green with large, rounded, red or brown lips, large eyes, and puffy eyelids. He often appears wearing a blue shirt.
- 19. The Pepe character was created as a “peaceful frog-dude” and a “blissfully stoned frog.”
- 20. Furie first included Pepe in a publication called Play Time in 2003.
- 21. Then in 2005, Pepe appeared in the on-line cartoon Boy's Club. In that appearance, Pepe first uses his most famous catchphrase, “feels good man.”
- 22. In 2006, Boy's Club 1 was released in print. Pepe appeared on the cover of Boy's Club 1, as well as in several comic panels in the book. Examples are reprinted here:

Cover of Boy's Club 1	Selected Images of Pepe from Boys Club 1

23. In addition, Boy's Club 1 included a profile of the Pepe character:

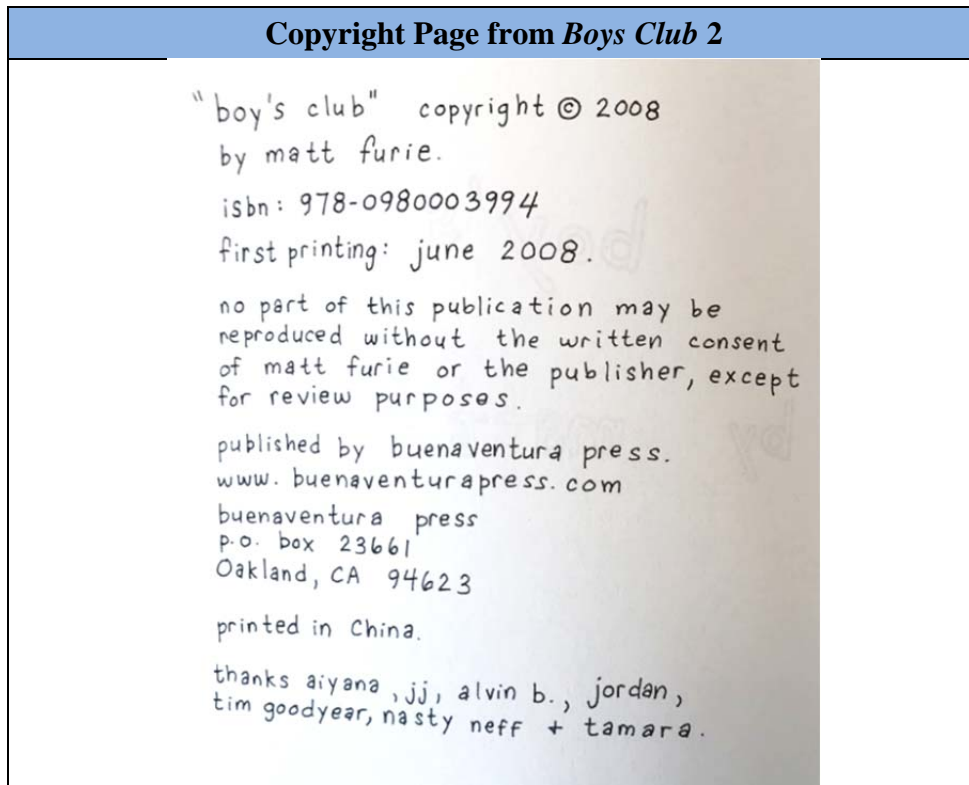

24. In June 2008, through Buenaventura Press, Furie published Boys Club 2, again featuring Pepe prominently on the cover, back jacket, and interior panels, examples of which are illustrated below:

25. Boys Club 2 also included a copyright page, making clear that Furie owned the copyright in the work:

26. Boy's Club continued in publication through 2016.

27. From 2005 to 2016, Furie created other depictions of Pepe, including each of the following examples, all of which Furie drew:

28. Furie is the sole legal owner of the character and images of Pepe the Frog—an original, creative work in which Furie owns protectable copyright interests. Furie’s work is the subject of multiple copyright applications pending before the U.S. Copyright Office. See Exs. E1 through E8.

Licensing of Pepe

29. Furie has expressly licensed his intellectual property rights in Pepe to certain licensees, including Bored Teenager, Hashtag Collectables, Yesterdays, and the creators of the What Do You Meme? card game. Licensed Pepe merchandise includes, for example, “Pepe the Frog - official stuffed doll,” sold by Hashtag Collectables, illustrated below:

Popularity of Pepe

30. Over time, Pepe grew in popularity, and became a popular internet meme.

31. In August 2014, singer Katy Perry tweeted an image of Pepe, and in December 2014, rapper Nicki Minaj posted an image of Pepe to Instagram.

32. By May 2015, the website BuzzFeed had posted over 1,200 Pepe images. Likewise, in 2015, Pepe was the most retweeted meme on Twitter.

Fringe “Alt Right,” Neo-Nazis, and White Supremacists “Reclaim” Pepe

33. On information and belief, in late 2015, in reaction to Pepe becoming mainstream, some users of the Internet imageboard 4chan began a campaign designed to “reclaim” Pepe, by mixing him with offensive material—for example, Nazi propaganda images. Throughout 2015 and during the 2016 U.S. Presidential campaign, the number of memes juxtaposing Pepe with racist, anti-Semitic, and other bigoted imagery and themes grew.

34. On or about October 13, 2015, an unauthorized image of Pepe dressed as Donald Trump and standing behind the Presidential seal appeared on Twitter:

35. On or about September 10, 2016, Donald Trump Jr. posted to Instagram an image that was a modified version of the movie poster for the film “The Expendables,” labeled “The Deplorables” and featured Pepe standing behind Trump and alongside other supporters of Trump’s presidential campaign:

36. Shortly after “The Deplorables” image was posted, news outlets began referring to Pepe as a “white nationalist symbol,” and Hillary Clinton’s campaign website posted an “explainer” stating that Pepe has been coopted by the alt-right and other white supremacists as a symbol associated with anti-Semitism and white supremacy.²

37. On September 27, 2016, the Anti-Defamation League added Pepe the Frog to their database of General Hate Symbols.

38. The association of Pepe with symbols of hate and with the alt-right movement has been a nightmare for Furie.

Furie’s Efforts to Disassociate Pepe from Hateful Causes

39. Furie was dismayed with Pepe’s association with white supremacy, anti-Semitism, and the alt-right. In October 2016, Furie partnered with the Anti-Defamation League to launch the #SavePepe campaign, to “reclaim” Pepe as a symbol for peace, love, and acceptance.

40. On May 6, 2017, disappointed with the continued unauthorized use of Pepe in connection with hateful imagery and themes, Furie posted an online comic in which Pepe has died and is shown at his funeral. At that time, Furie hoped that use of the Pepe character in connection with hateful speech would diminish and eventually cease.

Jessica Logsdon’s Images

41. Defendant Logsdon regards and markets herself as an artist who paints “political art.” However, instead of creating her own original works, many of Logsdon’s works are simply copies of Pepe, in specific scenarios. Certain of Logsdon’s works use Pepe to advocate violent, anti-immigrant, and alt-right messages.

42. Logsdon offers paintings of Pepe on her website, jessicalogsdon.com; on her Twitter feed; and on through her eBay merchant account.

43. Many of Logsdon’s images are blatant copies of Furie’s work, and many include “Pepe” in their titles. For example:

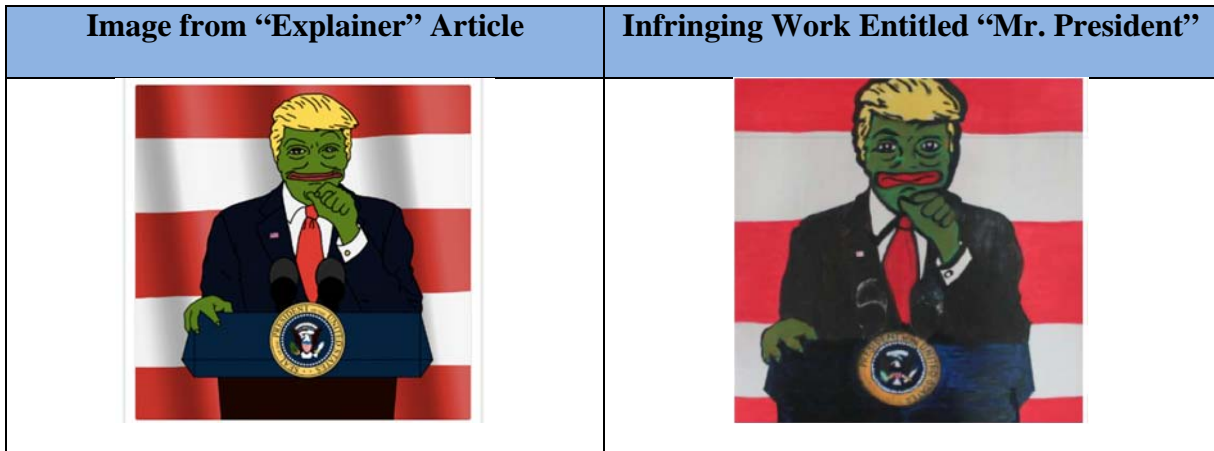

Title of Work	Infringing Image
“Smoking Pepe”
“Alt-Right”

Title of Work	Infringing Image
"Charlottesville"
"Donald Trump Pepe"
"Sad Pepe"
"Pepe Patrol"

Title of Work	Infringing Image
"Antifa"
"President"

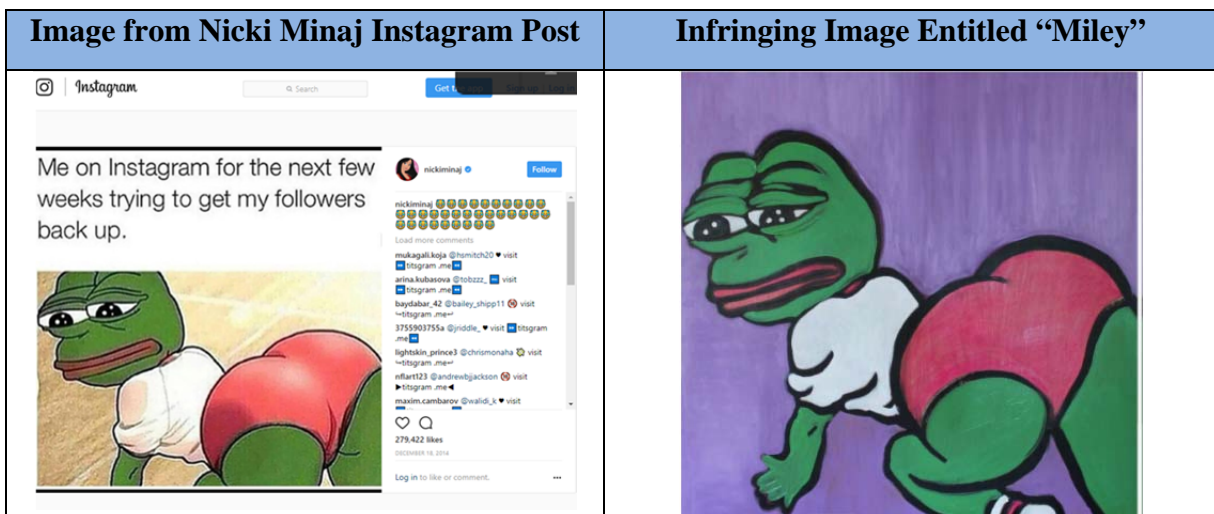

44. On information and belief, Logsdon hosted an art show called "Drain the Swamp" in April 2017, where she displayed these infringing works, and charged an entry fee. On information and belief, Logsdon has also sold these infringing images online, charging anywhere up to $500 per work.

45. On information and belief, Logsdon recently posted on the Internet message board, 4chan, that she was "influenced" by memes of Pepe circulating on the Internet during the 2016 U.S. Presidential campaign, and in particular, pointed to the memes discussed in the Clinton campaign's "explainer." Ex. F (4chan thread). On information and belief, one of the memes described in that "explainer," which depicts Pepe dressed as Donald Trump standing behind the Presidential seal (below left), was then directly copied by Logsdon in an image that she has sold and posted online repeatedly (below right):

46. For example, in June 2017, Logsdon tweeted her infringing “Mr. President” image, along with the following comment: “I have several Muslim neighbors and it appears they spend their days sitting on their porches just like the other section 8 neighbors.”

47. On information and belief, Logsdon also copied the Pepe image posted by Nicki Minaj on Instagram in 2014 (below left):

48. On information and belief, Logsdon intentionally copied Furie’s Pepe the Frog images and character, including derivative images of Pepe on the internet.

Furie’s Cease and Desist Request

49. To stop Logsdon’s copying and misuse of Pepe the Frog, on September 15, 2017, Furie notified Logsdon of her infringement and requested that she cease and desist any further use of Pepe the Frog. Furie also notified her hosting service of her infringement and sought removal of the materials from her website, jessicalogsdon.com, under the Digital Millennium Copyright Act.

50. In response, Logsdon posted Furie's cease and desist letter on her Twitter page and on 4chan, where she claimed that she was planning to "fight[] this on many fronts" and "most important among them" is that she was "exercising [her] religious freedom as a Kekistani."³ See Ex. F (4chan thread).

51. In addition, on September 20, 2017, Logsdon mailed a 24-inch by 24-inch painting to counsel for Furie, which was, on information and belief, in response to Furie's cease and desist request. The painting featured Pepe hugging an American flag and the text "SHH," "NO TEARS," and "ONLY MEMES NOW." The painting was not accompanied by any note or other explanation.

52. Logsdon has failed to comply with Furie's cease and desist request and continues to promote her infringing work on her Twitter and eBay pages. Since receiving the cease and desist letter, Logsdon has re-posted her infringing images multiple times, moving them to the top of her Twitter feed. Logsdon also submitted a counternotification to her website host to reinstate her infringing webpages. In the counternotice, she stated under the penalty of perjury that she had a "good faith belief" that her material was wrongly removed under the DMCA.

3) I have absolutely no doubt in my mind that the images I paint do not belong to Matt Furie or infringe on his copyright. Further, the argument that my paintings are related is specious, but a cursory examination will reveal that my paintings are so dissimilar as to be original. Also a search of the copyright registration database does not show a copyright for Pepe the Frog and all Matt Furie's copyrights are for unrelated content. From the court of my jurisdiction: To establish copyright infringement, plaintiff must show: "(1) ownership and validity of the copyright, and (2) potential violation of the copyright owner's exclusive rights by, for example, unauthorized reproduction and distribution of the copyrighted work." Pinkham v. Sara Lee Corp, 983 F.2d 824, 830 (8th Cir. 1992) Also, I will refer you to the "Dat Boi" meme which I have parodied in <http://jessicalogsdon.com/item/circuspepe> as related to the following article on Wikipedia: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dat_Boi

Clearly this action was triggered by the word "Pepe" which is NOT an actively registered trademark or related to an actively registered copyright. And clearly the takedown notice was NOT well thought out or executed.

4) Jessica Logsdon, [REDACTED]

5) I consent to the jurisdiction of the Federal District Court for the judicial district in which live.

Matt Furie has a high-powered law firm pursuing me for painting Pepe. I am planning on fighting this on many fronts, but most important among them is that I am exercising my religious freedom as a Kekistani.

Of course I have not mentioned this in my official response, as I do not want to play my cards. But I am looking forward to hearing from you, /pol/, as I need your help right now.

We all know that KEK is real, that meme magic is real, and that the Old Order is extremely threatened by the manifestation of KEK in the modern world. This is further manifestation of that fear.

Wut do?

Pic related. It is an official notice from Furie's law firm.

Here is my reply.

Mr. Louis Tompros (et. al.),

I understand that your client wishes to eliminate all possibility of his original artwork being used to advertise or otherwise support political messages with which he disagrees. However, I fail to see how his copyright was in any way infringed; I have created works that are so dissimilar that, as with the Cheshire Cat, only the smile remains.

I refer you to Kienitz v. Scornie Nation LLC and Campbell v. Acuff-Rose Music, Inc., both of which were decided in favor of the defendants, as a preliminary basis for my rejection of your claim. I will add an observation that "the Pepe" which I treat in my artwork entered into the political dialogue when then-candidate Hillary Clinton referred to the Pepe meme (as distinct from the Furie cartoon) as part of a far-right strategy designed to manipulate people into liking and voting for Donald Trump. Also, candidate Donald Trump tweeted an image that was patently not a Furie cartoon. In this sense my painting style is informed by the "Political Pepe" and not the "Furie Pepe." They are as dissimilar as Danger Mouse and Mickey Mouse.

I am a political artist who analyzes current events and creates work that is timely, provocative, critical and parodical. I am not alt-right, a neo-nazi or any other terrible label. Contrary to your assertion I do not promote alt-right messages, violence or hate. Rather, I am an urban farmer who works in one of the most economically distressed and ethnically diverse regions of the Midwest US. My home is across the street from a Somalian Mosque and I sell fruits and vegetables to people who attend religious services. Your labeling me as a purveyor of violent rhetoric is itself a form of violence perpetrated against a person about whom you know absolutely nothing.

You have linked a large list of artworks that I created and marketed on E-Bay. A cursory examination will reveal that the images (and political context) are so dissimilar from the Furie Pepe that they can be considered "original" and not derivative; alternatively, my images are influenced by a political dialogue that is scoped outside the protected body of work. Further to this point, I was not aware of the existence of Furie or his original artwork. Rather, I became aware of "Political Pepe" following Hillary Clinton's exposition on the subject (the famous "Donald Trump, Pepe the frog, and white supremacists: an explainer.") By the time I began investigating this, Pepe had ceased being the creation of Matt Furie and became an altogether separate, distinct part of the political conversation surrounding the 2016 election. My artwork was and remains part of that dialogue.

If you walk into a courtroom spouting "meme magic" "KEK wills it" and that autist faggotry to a judge, you might as well walk in there with a polo shirt, khakis and a tiki torch.

The real world is a real place dipshit. And laughing at what a dumbass you are isn't being "triggered" it's being satisfied. KEK wills that every dog has it's day, howabout that?

===part 3===

There is, of course, the Matt Furie "Pepe the Frog" which should be protected. And, based on your previous legal work, it is in the sense of taking down the offending children's book "The Adventures of Pepe and Pede" that was a thinly-veiled anti-Islamic narrative directed at children. However, I am not creating works derived from Furie's original drawings. In no sense was I copying or modifying his original image, as I was completely unaware of its existence. Rather I was responding to the popular culture phenomenon referenced by the following videos:

===part 4===

This is not to say that ignorance of the copyright holders interest in a copyrighted work is sufficient to shield an offender from legal liability. However, this begs the question: Were Hillary Clinton and CNN referencing Furie's original work ("Boy's Club") when they addressed Pepe as an alt-right image or were they addressing a new line of artwork that was distinct from the Furie Pepe? Of course we all know she was not referencing the Furie Pepe. And as you now know my paintings parody / lampoon / criticize the conversation started by candidates Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump. I am participating in a political dialogue regarding what CNN calls a "white nationalist symbol" as opposed to "copying a character from Boy's Club."

By the time then-candidate Clinton gave her speech there were hundreds if not thousands of non-Furie "Pepe-esque" images circulating on the Internet. An argument could be made that these images were derivatives of Furie's work, but the infringement claim(s) would be difficult or impossible to substantiate under 17 U.S. Code §107 given the substantial degree to which the images are differentiable from Furie's original work. Again, we are looking at the Cheshire Cat smiling down on us. Alternatively, to say that I have infringed on Furie's copyright is "a bridge too far" as the term "Pepe" has become too genericized to recapture.

==fin==

I would like to point out that Matt Furie is pictured in a CNN interview wearing a "Pepe meme shirt" that clearly contains appropriated Pokemon imagery (I have attached it to this correspondence). This particular image can be easily linked to the alt-right, though Furie is wearing a cropped image that hides the more disturbing content. Does this make him a white supremacist? By your reasoning (guilt by association) I would have to say your client is promoting violence and bigotry. The tone you take with me in your letter certainly leads me to suspect that you are sympathetic to that mission.

Thank you for your understanding in this matter. As indicated, I have not violated Furie's copyright in any meaningful way and clearly I have created artworks that are so distinct as to be considered original, or at the very least "sufficiently transformative" as per Kienitz v. Sconnie Nation LLC or "sufficiently parodical" as per Campbell v. Acuff-Rose Music, Inc. I am also participating in a political dialogue started by Hillary Clinton and President Donald Trump and sustained by CNN, CBS, ABC, BBC, etc. Given this set of facts and supporting case law I am sure you now consider the matter closed.

Please respond, as time is of the essence in these kinds of things.

Respectfully Yours,

The Artist Jessica Logsdon

It is real, I am real, and I am not profiting off of any sales. I make analogue memes. If you didn't steal your copy of photoshop you pay for it. I am asking the consumer of my version of memes to pay the shipping cost on $0.99 ebay auctions. For oil paintings.

I am participating in political speech; I am not seeking to profit only to pay the underlying cost of making memes.

This is political dialogue, and obviously it has been effective to some degree or else uptight law firms would not come sharking.

You're not getting sued for painting it. You can not be sued for that within the United states of America.

You're getting sued for trying to monetize somebody else's intellectual property.

You are far too stupid to fight this, and you are too arrogant for the concept of alleviating your own ignorance to even occur to you. This is a dreadful combination of character flaws, and will lead you to ruin if you don't manage yourself.

You are going to get absolutely bodied in court. You need to get a lawyer, a real lawyer, and mitigate the damage as much as possible.

And for the love of god do not argue with the lawyer about what you think is and isn't right, I promise that he did not make any of the laws, just fucking listen for once, this is serious.

I'm not a lawyer, but I work in publishing and deal with this stuff daily.

From Wikipedia on "Fair Use"

"In Campbell v. Acuff-Rose Music Inc[7] the U.S. Supreme Court recognized parody as a potential fair use, even when done for profit.....The Campbell court ... distinguished parodies from satire, which they described as a broader social critique not intrinsically tied to ridicule of a specific work and so not deserving of the same use exceptions as parody because the satirist's ideas are capable of expression without the use of the other particular work."

If you stop profiting from the work, they will not come after you.

If you want to keep profiting, they may still decide you're not worth a lawsuit unless you're making >$50k/year.

You should contact Marc Randazza. He's an outspoken 1st amendment attorney who loves cases like this. He'll talk to you about your options at the very least, free of charge. He helped me with a Facebook lawsuit once and I've always respected his opinion after that.

If I post a digital image then there is no consequence, however if I post an analogue image then I am violating copyright?

Where does copyright begin and end, in terms of derivatives? I only learned of Pepe through the political news. I only knew Trump-related Pepes.

I attempted to explain that there is a scope that covers Furie's Pepe and then another scope that voers teh political dialogue landscape, and that to enforce his copyright would deny a much larger conversation from occurring.

They start with analogue memes, and then they will come for your digital memes.

Chaos is a form of change and generally though not always results with some form of order emerging.

Ancient hive mind mapped what some call KEK. I ran into Pepe as a result of KEK being a sign in the mind (shared mind) of /pol/

I was not painting Pepe's to make $$$, at all. I can show with receipts and all tracked expenses that it costs me money to "sell my memes." I lose money, just like every other meme maker who pays for the internet access he or she uses to post meme content. I was not on social media so I was "selling" my art at $0.99 plus shipping cost in order to reach an audience. The end user pays for internet the same way an analogue meme consumer pays for shipping. There is no profit, but there is a minimum entry on e-bay of $0.99. AND I never sold a painting for more than $0.99 as proven by ebay records. I have never sold a painting from my website.

I came here to discuss meme magic; magic is always presented to the mind as an ignorance for how something actually operates. One must learn the methods to know how the card tricks are done.

It is the same as what you are doing, it just requires a internet connection. You do not pay for the internet connection that a user is buying in order to view your meme. The end user consumes internet in the same way a purchaser "moves a painting in the pipe" by paying for shipping.

Everyone is spending money no one is making money. Perfect system. Leads invariably to usury, right?

Kikes are so afraid of Pepe, they sue some lovely woman from where-ever USA. Matt Furie didn't give a fuck about Pepe's many incantations, and was even amused/honored by the flattery of imitation until the kikes gave him some shekels to be their puppet for spurious attacks on alt-right imagery. Furie really wants royalties for someone's $.99 Ebay auctions? No, the kikes can't survive without censorship.

making money and profiting are two different fucking things you retard you posted the artwork on a website for the intention of selling it you put a price on it because you wanted to sell it someone sent money to you

you accept the money and send them the product

it doesn't matter if you made a profit, or if you used that money to pay for shipping

YOU MADE MONEY ON IT

a possible question in court will probably be along the lines of "why didn't you post it on social media with no price tags if you wanted to share your memes for free?"

The fact is that every pepe meme is derivative of the original cartoon, it's just that suing autists who make this for fun and not money is a lot harder than some fucking moron who then rips off that work and charges for it.

I came here expecting to find people who weren't cowardly, but rather brave, strong, intelligent winners who never back down and don't set themselves up to lose.

This is one of the most important nodes in the world consciousness. This is where memes are generated in a mass hypnosis, like some kind of inevitable explosion racing through space predestined to modify everything and utterly unstoppable; the force of memes is like the phase transition of liquid water to a solid.

Do you know what kind of force that is?

Anyway, I did not come here because I was scared or needed rescuing. I came here to show you where the edge is and see how close you aren't to it.

Some of you did read my initial response. Am I braiding my hair so a Knight can come save me?

It is called the "legal art" and it is how you "approach the court" when filing motions and such.

Hustler Magazine, Inc. v. Falwell, 485 U.S. 46 (1988), is a United States Supreme Court case in which the Court held that the First and Fourteenth Amendments prohibit public figures from recovering damages for the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress (IIED), if the emotional distress was caused by a caricature, parody, or satire of the public figure that a reasonable person would not have interpreted as factual

To add: they are suing on the grounds that you are making the artwork to promote violence and hate, which are not the case unless you Twitter explicitly stated it was to harass or harm. Its also the 1st Amendment that allows freedom of expression, which is legal in the United States.

If any of you seriously think bringing my legal correspondence here was a mistake you are not fully aware of what is being encoded in the fabric of internet history. None of us has an existence that will persist longer than the information we are now creating.

My paintings will be destroyed before the memory of this place is lost. No one presently living will reap the rewards of harvesting all that we are currently creating.

I came here because this place is bigger than the sum total of all of us; we are cells in an ego-consciousness that is ignorant of the cellular communications.

I came here because, well, obi-wan.

Pic related: I revealed it onstage at a big fundraiser. I told everyone it was named "Philanthropig." IT was originally covered is sating. The painting was 8 feet tall and four feet wide.

I have pics.

Let's be honest here. The jew-bastard lawyers probably are getting millions of shekels to go after this lovely woman selling $.99 Pepees. Did Furie do a cost-benefit analysis? Or did some deep-pocketed ADL kikes put him up to it? Probably our tax money anyway, with the "fight muh antisemitism" funds the greedy zhids got from Congress. No one in their right mind would sue, thinking the lawsuit would get a payday. It's just more hideous, jew-bastards at the ADL attempting to silence freedom of speech.

Pepe the Frog has light colored lips while the meme pepe frog has dark lips, a different colored shirt. Even at first look its not even the same character and is an immediate parody. Second, Matt killed the character, never to be used again, ever. Even in his own words. Third, a parody is completely legal to be used in any capacity. Fourth, freedom of speech and freedom of expression are legal in the country. Fifth, they are incorrectly addressing your parody as directly promoting violence and hate which in of itself is libel - freedom of expression still stands, faggot.

The lawyer was making a libelous statement directly to OP as a threat to his character, and what the lawyer states is a direct extension to her client, Matt Furie. This is how law works when you bring a lawyer into it. They are hoping OP is just some little kid who wouldn't bother to contact a lawyer and have the lawyer counter-sue or file a cease and desist for Furie and the lawyer to stop harassment and contact.

I'm willing to fucking put $100 on the line that the moment OP contacts a lawyer, the lawyer will immediately tell him he has a case to counter-sue and destroy them in court, with a cease and desist being the least they can get.

If you can find such a link you can argue that it is a conflict of interest, you are being persecuted, and your first amendment rights are being violated. Just Google "Furie, ADL, Pepe" and that's the link to this ridiculous lawsuit to get some woman's pizza money. Furie should come onto this thread and apologize for embroiling himself with the ADL, an organization literally founded because a kike got lynched for murdering a little White girl.

Finally, a decent response.

You don't fuck with the law. You don't pretend you know more than a lawyer. You don't conflate justice with justice system. You don't project juvenile dreams of morality onto the current legal system.

Quote:

New York, NY, October 14, 2016 ... The Anti-Defamation League (ADL) is joining forces with the artist who created "Pepe the Frog" in an effort to take back the popular internet meme from racists and use the frog's likeness as a force for good.

Pepe artist Matt Furie reached out to ADL after a proliferation of hateful Pepe memes appeared on the internet and social media, prompting ADL to designate the frog as a calling card of racists in its online database of visual hate symbols. White supremacists and other haters had co-opted Pepe by creating a series of anti-Semitic and racist images of the cartoon amphibian in Klan or Nazi regalia, or depicting him as a stereotypical Jew.

"Pepe was never intended to be used as a symbol of hate," said Jonathan A. Greenblatt, ADL CEO. "The sad frog was meant to be just that, a sad frog. We are going to work with Matt and his community of artists reclaim Pepe so that he might be used as a force for good, or at the very least to help educate people about the dangers of prejudice and bigotry."

To that end, Furie will create a series of positive Pepe memes and messages, which ADL will promote on its social media channels with the hashtag, #SavePepe. ADL will encourage others to retweet and share positive images of the frog in an attempt to rehabilitate him and move his image out of the realm of hate speech.

"It's completely insane that Pepe has been labeled a symbol of hate, and that racists and anti-Semites are using a once peaceful frog-dude from my comic book as an icon of hate," Furie said. "It's a nightmare, and the only thing I can do is see this as an opportunity to speak out against hate."

I cannot ignore the letter they sent; I need to respond tomorrow. I came here to show you my initial response. Just because.

You say I should be afraid, but afraid of what? You have practical experience fighting these kinds of battles, or are you operating from the gamblers sense? There are no chained outputs on a roulette wheel.

This is all part of a conversation that, in most ways, started here. I am not a major part of it, however I am showing you a part of what is happening outside this window.

I am telling you that I can prove I do not make a profit; the profit motive is not why I do what I do.

Except if the charges filed insist that Pepe patently does not represent hateful "alt-right" sentiments, they themselves are admitting that this is not the same Pepe.

All that has to be proven is that copyright laws were not violated. Furie's Pepe has green lips and looks different from ours. There have been other "Pepe the Frogs" in media, such as one in a preschool cartoon.

Furie only owns his "Boy's Club" creation, not the 4chan Pepe that is not remotely similar. This is a very winnable case.

This isn't a good argument in the eyes of the law. Ignorance to the law is irrelevant.

>i didn't know the person I stabbed was human, i thought it was a mannequin.

Nah. Your argument should be confined to the borders of the law, and nothing more. No appeals to anything but a legal outcome in your favor.
